Dear Ron,

I am writing in response to your letter dated February 12 and following up on my email below. I understand Lyn Cantor has responded relative to the specific inquire pertaining to Procera and am responding relative to your questions regarding Francisco Partners.

Let me start by saying that Francisco Partners recognizes the importance of corporate governance and social responsibility. We spend considerable time and effort regarding the thoughtful development and implementation of proper governance and social responsibility policies and processes for Francisco Partners and for the companies in which we invest.

In our nearly twenty-year history, Francisco Partners has invested in over 200 technology companies. In our capacity as an investor, we work with company management teams to enhance (where necessary) and to implement robust corporate governance principles, business processes and policies, and business strategy, including social responsibility policies and practices.

In addition, as an investor, FP mandates the adoption of compliant business ethics policies and processes. Where appropriate, such policies and processes are based on, among other things, the engagement of outside parties and a variety of benchmarking information sources, including World Bank information.

We are very much willing to engage in a constructive dialogue with Citizen Lab on the topic of enhanced corporate governance and social responsibility, but we were disappointed to learn that you had engaged in media outreach prior to our commencing such a dialogue notwithstanding my prompt email below. FP and Citizen Lab sit on the same side of the table with respect to such matters: we both have a strong interest and are working hard to ensure that companies develop and implement appropriate social responsibility policies and practices.

Best,
Andrew

Ron,

Thank you for reaching out. We appreciate that you did and welcome the opportunity to speak with you on this important topic. I am traveling this week, but will be back in touch shortly.

Best,
Andrew
